

Useful for beginners in video production

Posted by frandesouza - 22 Feb 2013 04:50

---

As some may know, I am a self-taught video editor working in a small local television station. I was always interested in knowing more about my profession, so I spent many hours of my free time looking for information and good reading on the subject (and still do). Several years ago, I found this site, and I was pleasantly surprised it's still alive after so many years. If you are just starting in the field of video production I recommend you to read each of the modules, there you will find vital information if you're interested in making a living (or just a serious hobby) on video production. Do not feel disappointed with the site design. What really matters is the content.

<http://www.cybercollege.com/tvp001.htm>

=====

Re: Useful for beginners in video production

Posted by figmo124 - 22 Feb 2013 05:33

---

that's a good resource. Thanks!

=====

Re: Useful for beginners in video production

Posted by asilnevs - 24 Feb 2013 12:59

---

I came across this amazing website: www.creativelive.com

But for us, videoguys, this is the place to be: www.creativelive.com/video 😊

You can watch live courses for free or buy the course for very reasonable prices.

=====