Hi there,

I'm a professional editor in Italy, working mainly on feature films, documentaries, and independent production project. I use both Avid or FCT but if it's possible I want to leave it for an alternative open source software and I think that Lightworks would be the right choice.

I would very very much like to be an alpha tester of the Mac version!!!

I would love to help with testing but I haven't seen an update yet for a Mac release. The site has said a Mac release is in the works for a long time now.

Apparently, in their FB page LWKS mentioned that the Mac version will be ready for February or before, so... very soon. The admins said that the mac release will be version 12:

Apparently it is an Alpha, but with the development for the Windows and Linux versions it will be hopefully upgraded soon to a complete stable version.

Hi,

i have been for thirty years professional editor in tv magazines, documentaries, news reels in Italy (RAI).

At the same time I'm teaching video editing at a journalism school in Roma.

I would adopt Lightworks as editing software for the school, and I would appreciate to be an alpha tester for the mac version.

Greetings

Andrea Casentini

Hi!

I've been working on short documentaries for German television (5-45 minutes) for five years.

At the moment I'm working at a company, editing Imagefilm s and I'm teaching several video courses at a highschool to children between 10 and 20.

I'd like to push both our company and the school-courses in the direction of Lightworks and would like to volunteer as Alpha-tester for the Mac-version.

Also, two interns at referenzfilm and several kids at school would assist me in testing.

We'd love to be part of the team!

Thanks in advance, Mirko Schieder, head of post-production, referenz film

I'd also like to take part. I picked up the console when they offered them for half price and I'm getting antsy to use it.

Matt Sandford, the Lightworks Product Manager, has posted an update in a thread about V12
